INTRODUCTION

We are pleased to present our first edition of the Saskatchewan Women's Directory.

This Directory is designed to serve several purposes:

- To provide a ready source of information about services of interest to women.
- To provide a listing of women's organizations currently active in the province.
- To give individual women and organizations an indication of the groups active in areas of interest to women, to increase referral and communication between groups, to point out organizations women can contact to become active, and to inspire women with the diversity of activity taking place.

A sincere effort has been made to include services and organizations from all areas of Saskatchewan – rural, northern and urban. In addition to the basic organizational description and main contact address, the Regional Addresses Section indicates services and organizational representatives located throughout the province.

This Directory is divided into several sections, which are indicated in the Table of Contents. We have attempted to organize the information in an accessible and logical order. We hope that you will find it useful for yourself and your friends, clients and co-workers.

The world of organizations and services is a dynamic one. We have attempted to ensure that the information contained in this Directory is as accurate as possible. Yet, every week there are new developments as organizations form and change. This Directory can only capture a picture of this changing vista at one point in time. Thus in the future there will inevitably be changes to this picture. Your corrections, additions or suggestions would be appreciated. Please contact the Women's Secretariat.

SASKATCHEWAN WOMEN'S SECRETARIAT

The Saskatchewan Women's Secretariat is an agency within the provincial government which ensures that women's particular needs and perspectives are considered in the development and delivery of legislation, policies and programs of government. As a central point of contact for issues that impact on women, it provides information and referral services.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We would like to acknowledge the assistance of the many women's organizations, non-governmental organizations and government agencies listed in this directory. Without the patient help of individuals in these organizations, this Directory would not have been possible. Thank you for your support.

Note: The views and policies of the organizations listed do not necessarily reflect the views and policies of the Women's Secretariat or the Government of Saskatchewan. The Women's Secretariat cannot take responsibility for programs which are cancelled or do not provide the quality of service anticipated by persons using this Directory.

Section 1 – ABORIGINAL WOMEN

Introduction
This section highlights the activities of Aboriginal women and services provided for Aboriginal women. Many other services are also available and are described in other sections of this Directory. We have noted the activities of the major provincial Aboriginal women's organizations. We have also highlighted the activities of a few of the regional and local groups to provide understanding of the kind of work they are doing. There are many other active groups, including the Locals affiliated with the Aboriginal Women's Council of Saskatchewan and the District Committees affiliated with the Saskatchewan Treaty Indian Women's Council. To find out more comprehensive information about the most recent developments, do not hesitate to call the individual and provincial organizations.

Regional Mental Health Clinics
(see Regional Addresses Section)

The Mental Health Services Branch provides or oversees a full range of community and hospital-based mental health services in each of the eight mental health regions. Provides support services to Northern Health. Core services are delivered in four distinct program areas: child and youth; adult community; rehabilitation; and in-patient. The Branch is also responsible for the Saskatchewan Hospital North Battleford, which is the only provincial mental health facility to provide long-term care. Community-based services are offered through full-time and part-time mental health clinics. In addition, the regional Rural Services teams travel to all parts of their region, offering a wide range of individual, family support and rehabilitation services.

The mental health regions are headquartered in the major cities of Saskatchewan (see Regional Addresses Section). The Branch also funds a range of non-governmental organizations that offer services primarily to persons with long-term mental illness.

In addition to the wide range of mental health services provided by the Branch, specialized programs are offered in regions where a specific need has been identified. Because specialized programs may be offered on a time-limited or a needs basis, persons interested in obtaining more information on either specialized programs or services provided by Mental Health Services should contact the nearest mental health region.

Specialized programs listed below were operating in March, 1991. These listings indicate the types of programs which may be provided.

A person interested in a program that is not listed for their area should contact their nearest mental health region because such a program may have started recently, or could be started if a need is shown. In any case, even if a group does not exist, individual counselling is available for all mental health problems.

Section 6 – PARENTING AND FAMILY

Introduction
This section describes services and organizations concerned with: Children and Youth; Family Life; and other Family-Related Organizations. The organizations listed under Family Life provide some service to assist families including teen mothers, single parents, families who are having some difficulties and people who simply want to improve their family life.

Note that referral may be required for some programs. The organizations can tell you whether referral is necessary and how to obtain a referral.

Family support services include a range of counselling, support, education and information to individuals and families needing assistance.

Some organizations offer teen parent programs, matching teen mothers and their children with trained volunteers.

Parent aide programs assist families having difficulties by having a parent aide work with the family in their home.

The organizations may also provide other services such as: assistance in locating housing, transportation, and aboriginal language interpreters.

Children and Youth

Big Sisters Associations

Contact: see Regional Addresses Section for individual organizations

Provide guidance, support and friendship to children by matching them to mature adult women. Some programs work with boys and girls and some include dual parent families. The majority of children in Big Sisters associations are girls from single parent families which may be headed by a female or male parent. Joint Big Brother/Big Sister organizations match both boys to men and girls to women.

Organizations usually work with children aged five or six to age fifteen or sixteen. Hold educational workshops and recreational activities for volunteers, children and parents. Concerned with family life, parenting skills, education, personal development. Also concerned with problems such as physical and sexual abuse, addictions and personality problems, referring children for additional assistance when needed.

discussed. Immunization and health assessment services are included.

Child Protection
Saskatchewan Social Services
Contact: Regional and District Social Service Offices. Call separate child protection number where available. (see Regional Addresses Section)

Evenings and weekends: Call After Hours Crisis Services (see Section 8 - Family Violence)

Child neglect or abuse may include physical abuse, sexual abuse, physical neglect, emotional neglect and emotional abuse. It can occur for a variety of reasons.

Parents who think that they may be neglecting or abusing their children can be helped in their home through personal marital and economic counselling; parent aide services; day care services; self-help groups; parenting courses; programs for children with disabilities and special needs; and programs and support for single parents. Asking for help is not considered to be a sign that the person has failed as a parent. It is a sign that the parent recognizes the difficulty and cares enough about their child to do something about it.

Members of the community who believe that a child is being abused or neglected have a legal responsibility to report to Social Services offices, after hours crisis services, or the police. All reports are investigated by a trained professional worker to determine the course of action which will best help the child and family involved.

Section 8 – FAMILY VIOLENCE

Introduction

The services and groups in this section are grouped under the following headings: Safe Shelters; Crisis Counselling Services; After Hours Crisis; Counselling Services and Groups Concerned With Violence.

Definitions

Sexual assault is any form of unwanted or forced sexual activity. Includes: date rape; sexual assault within marriage; sexual harassment; assault by a stranger; child sexual abuse.

Abuse can be physical, sexual or verbal. It includes economic abuse (control of money). It also includes psychological abuse. This may involve "put-downs", persistent threats, or witnessing violence against their children, other relatives, friends, pets or cherished possessions. The abuser can be a boyfriend, husband, live-in lover, ex-husband or ex-lover.

(Source: Resource Guide - Violence Against Women - Services and Programs in Saskatchewan, May-June/89. Family Violence Working Group, author Sherri Moisiuk. The Resource Guide was used extensively in preparing Section 8.)

Safe Shelters

Transition houses, interval houses and safe shelters are places where a woman and her children can go if she has been beaten, abused physically or psychologically, or threatened with violence by her husband or partner. They provide short-term living accommodation and crisis counselling. Counselling and support services assist women in re-establishing themselves after leaving the transition house. They may provide counselling referrals to women not needing to stay at the shelter. They frequently provide outreach educational services. (Street addresses for shelters are confidential.)
